E&DBKA Membership Information for 2007

Bee Disease Insurance (BDI)

Only provides insurance against the effects of disease, and covers the cost of replacement hive parts should equipment have to be destroyed. Full details are on the BBKA web site.

It is very important that you insure for all the colonies that you expect to have during the year - under insurance will result in claims being disallowed or reduced

E&DBKA membership includes Bee Disease Insurance for three colonies; additional colonies are charged at

Up to 5 colonies (inc the basic three) an additional £2.00
Up to 10 colonies (inc the basic three) an additional £5.25
Up to 15 colonies (inc the basic three) an additional £7.75
Up to 20 colonies (inc the basic three) an additional £9.50
Up to 25 colonies (inc the basic three) an additional £11.10
More than 25 colonies (inc the basic three) and up to a maximum of 39 at 50p a colony.

Apiary

There are rules relating to the Association's apiary sites. These are intended to protect the welfare of the bees and for the benefit of all members. Copies are available on the website, in the main Apiary Hut and will be issued to members who use Association sites. Any member placing bees on the sites will be bound by those rules.

Sites on the Associations Apiaries are intended for those who are not able to find alternative sites for their bees, either in their gardens, on an allotment, or a friend's garden, etc., and are offered subject to availability. Each site limited to one full size colony and one nuc.

Our main Apiary is principally to provide a supportive environment for those beginning beekeeping, and members are encouraged to find alternative sites for colonies when they feel able to.

Courses

The association intends to run a beginners course each year, in the spring, leading to the Basic Assessment.

Other courses may be organised, and members are reminded that there is a range of courses offered by the BBKA

Adopt a Hive

The associations adopt a hive scheme is available for one year, to those who have undertaken our beginners course, to enable them to gain experience of beekeeping. Details on the website or in the apiary hut

Swarm List

The Association publishes a list of competent members willing to attend reports of swarms. The Association Apiarist will be the arbiter of who may be included on the list. It is a condition that no charge is imposed for the service.

This is a valuable service and helps us to provide colonies of bees to those who want them. However, only experienced beekeepers should undertake it as they may be in difficult locations, high above the ground. On occasions, collecting them will be impossible, and then the beekeeper should have the confidence to advise that they can not be collected and a pest control company should be contacted.

Public Liability Insurance does not cover swarm collection, so be very careful!

There are also many mistaken reports of swarms, and calls to attend wasps nests, bumble bees nests, and usually the reporter wants the job done urgently. Beekeepers are advised to carefully screen requests over the phone before attending, and only going when they are confident that there is really a swarm to collect.

Privacy and Data Protection

Membership information is stored on computers. It is not passed on to third parties outside of the Association except:

1. If you are on the swarm list, to the Police and Local Authorities.
2. For the purposes of Middlesex Federation and BBKA membership and Bee Disease Insurance
3. If you subscribe to Beecraft, to the publishers for their mailing list
4. At the request of CSL Regional Bee Inspectors for the purposes of disease control

Note: Emails will be sent blind copy (bcc) as an anti-spam measure.
